

Abstract

The earth's rotation influences dynamics of large scale flows significantly. In this talk, we will discuss the number of traveling wave families near a shear flow under the influence of Coriolis force, which indicates richer nonlinear long time dynamical behavior around the shear flow than the non-rotating case. Here the traveling speeds of the traveling waves lie outside the range of the flow.