

Abstract

In this talk, we count the number of ways to represent an element in a prime finite field as a sum of elements from different multiples of a small subset. More generally, we study the problem of solution counting of certain linear equations over subsets of finite fields. We establish the basic properties about the number of solutions, and connect the number with lower bounds of complex norms of sums of roots of unity.